Big ears told his father about what he heard. The farmer sent Rubber instead of General this time. The soldiers thought Rubber was General,

 (Listen Carefully : _____
_____)

Once the soldiers arrived with Rubber at the palace, the king shouted,

 (Listen Carefully : _____
_____)

The soldiers did as they were ordered to. Rubber's arms, legs, and neck were all tied to each horse. When the king gave out a signal, the five horses began to run in different directions.

The king thought that General would die this time for sure, but he was wrong. Rubber, which the king confused with General, did not die.

 (Listen Carefully : _____
_____)

The people could not believe what they were seeing. Rubber's body kept stretching more and more. When the horses went back to their places, Rubber's body turned back to normal. Rubber enjoyed how his body turned larger and then smaller.

 (Listen Carefully : _____
_____)

The king was so startled that he could not say a word. He sent Rubber back home.

The next day, the king prepared a large pot in front of the palace gate. Big ears heard this and told his father what he had heard. The farmer went to Cold and said,
